Baliense Spas

Walk down any street in any town in Bali, and you will see any number of shops offering facials, massages and beauty treatments.

Prices for these services vary from shop to shop, and so do the levels of sanitation and hygienge, so it's best to shop around.

There is no harm in asking to see a treatment room before you commit to having the treatment done. We found everything from impeccably kept rooms to those covering with mold and peeling paint.

We got a 3 hour beauty treatment (including a full body massage, full body scrub, facial, and lotus flower bath) in a spa in Ubud for the equivalent of $8.

The thing we found the most exasperating is that the music that is piped into may of the spas we visited is the same soundtrack. Nice at first, but a bit annoying after you have listened to the pan pipes for the sixth time!

Bali Beaches

The beaches in Bali are amazing! We really enjoyed the tranquility of Sanur Beach. We stayed at the Diwangkara Resort on Sanur Beach,and it was great!

We got a last minute deal online two days before our arrival, and we paid only $50 a night. The Diwangkara staff were really sweet and helpful and our breakfasts at Diwangkara (included in the price) were excellent, featuring different fresh local dishes every morning during our stay the the resort.

We could walk out to Sanur Beach from our room at the resort. We enjoyed sunbathing and getting Balinese massages on the beach. To be honest, though, the swimming wasn't great on Sanur Beach, especially at low tide. However, it was wonderful to see the Balinese fishing vessels coming in at sunset every evening – absolutely magical!

You may prefer Kuta Beach, especially if you are into surfing.

Indonesian Hotels

There are a variety of hotels in Indonesia, from the cheap and (sometimes) cheerful losmen to the top-of-the range villas and resorts.

Losmen are of widely varying standards in safety, cleanliness and hygiene. Some losmen we looked in Indonesia were absolutely filthy and in a very poor part of the city. Others were clean and safe. Trust your instincts when booking into a losmen locally in Indonesia. Never sacrifice your personal safety for the sake of saving a little bit of money!

Also beware of men hawking losmen on the street or so-called "guides" who want to show you to accommodation around the city. While some of them are well-meaning and want to be helpful, others may lead you to unkempt accomodation owned by a relative, and then request a "finder's fee" for helping you.

Holidays in Indonesia

Holidays in Indonesia can be a magical experience, wheter planned extensively in advance or done with spontaneity.

You may plan your vacation to Indonesia in advance with the help of a travel agent. We planned the majority of our holiday online, using sites like www.opodo.com and www.expedia.com

We hound the "Eyewitness Travel" book on Bali and Lombok and the "Lonely Planet" guide to Indonesia really helpful when planning what places we wnated to see during our holiday to Indonesia.
