ARGUMENT(S)
The Examining Attorney has issued a final refusal of the mark FREE ROAMING on the grounds that it is allegedly generic. For the reasons set forth herein, Applicant respectfully requests reconsideration and withdrawal of the genericness refusal. The term FREE ROAMING is not generic because it is not commonly understood by the public as the name for a genus of goods or services. To the extent that there is a commonly understood name for eggs or dairy products that come from animals which are allowed to graze free outside of enclosures, that name is “free range,” not “free roaming.” This is explained in the attached Declaration of John Brzenzski (Exhibit 1), Applicant’s President, who has significant experience in the food industry. As Mr. Brzenzski explains, Applicant was the first company in the industry to use the term FREE ROAMING to refer to chicken and dairy products. Other companies almost always use the term “free range,” or in some cases “cage-free,” to refer to these types of products. The statements in Mr. Brzenzki’s declaration is supported by the fact that a Google search for “free range” reveals over 7,500,000 results (Exhibit 2), while a Google search for “free roaming” reveals only 1,810,000 results, most of which are related to mobile phone roaming, computer games, or other topics having nothing to do with chickens, eggs, or dairy products (Exhibit 3). Likewise, a search for “free range eggs” reveals over 1,540,000 results (Exhibit 4), whereas a search for “free roaming eggs” has only 46,900 hits (Exhibit 5), many of which relate to Applicant and Applicant’s products. The evidence regarding dairy products is even stronger: there are over 40,000 hits for “free range milk”

(Exhibit 6) but only 565 hits for “free roaming milk” (Exhibit 7), the overwhelming majority of which refer to Applicant's products.

The dictionary definitions, and lack thereof, also demonstrate that the only generic term commonly recognized by consumers for these types of food products is “free range.” The Merriam-Webster English Dictionary, the Cambridge English Dictionary, and Dictionary.com (based on the Random House Dictionary) all contain definitions for “free range” (Exhibits 8-10). However, none of these dictionaries contain definitions for “free roaming” (Exhibits 11-13).

Finally, the fact that the common generic term for the products at issue is “free range” is also shown by the web sites of Applicant’s competitors, which almost always use “free range” (or in some cases “cage free”) to identify the products. Applicant is attaching printouts from the web pages of Rocklands Farm, Chino Valley Ranchers, Farmer’s Harvest, and Eatwell Farm, all of which use the term “free range” to identify the types of eggs at issue (Exhibits 14-17).

Therefore, if any generic name exists for eggs and dairy products that come from animals kept outside of enclosures, that term is “free range,” not FREE ROAMING. See California Cooler, Inc. v. Loretto Winery, Inc., 774 F.2d 1451, 1455 (9th Cir. 1985) (finding that CALIFORNIA COOLER was not generic because “if any generic term exists for such a beverage, it is ‘wine cooler’”); In re Trek 2000 International Ltd., 97 USPQ2d 1106 (TTAB 2010) (finding that THUMBDRIVE was not generic where “the record shows that ‘flash drive’ is the commonly used term of art for these portable digital storage devices”); In re Harte Hanks, Inc., Serial No. 77/071,666 (TTAB July 30, 2010) (finding that THE FLYER for advertising newspapers was not generic because the commonly recognized generic name for these goods was “shoppers”). Although the Examining Attorney notes that in some cases there can be more than one generic name for a particular genus, in this case there is simply no evidence that FREE ROAMING is understood by consumers to refer to the genus of goods or services at issue, which are overwhelmingly referred to as “free range” rather than FREE ROAMING.

The term FREE ROAMING is not a generic noun, but rather an indication of source referring exclusively or almost exclusively to Applicant’s products, or at most an adjective describing the nature or characteristics of the goods. It is therefore entirely unlike the cases cited by the Examining Attorney, in which various nouns which are clearly the common name for a class of goods or services have been found to be generic.

The Examining Attorney has argued that genericness is not limited to nouns, and that an adjective can be generic if the adjective refers to the relevant genus or category of goods and/or services. Although this is true, it is extremely rare for an adjective to be found generic. The cases cited by the Examining Attorney do not support his position, since the terms at issue in those cases (BUNDT and ATTIC) are both nouns. The term BUNDT in “bundt cake” (from the In re Northland Aluminum case), is not an adjective but an attributive noun or a noun adjunct, i.e. a noun that modifies another noun. Likewise, the term ATTIC in “attic sprinkler” is not an adjective, but a noun that limits and clarifies the noun “sprinkler.” In fact, the TMEP cites only one case in which an adjective has been found to be descriptive (PERMA PRESS). TMEP § 1209.01(c)(ii). This is because in most cases, adjectives are descriptive rather than generic, since they describe a feature, characteristic, or quality of the goods or services, rather than functioning as the commonly understood name for a genus of goods or services. See Magic Wand, Inc. v. RDB, Inc., 940 F.2d 638 (Fed. Cir. 1991) (finding that TOUCHLESS for automobile washing services was descriptive rather than generic).

Applicant also notes that the burden to establish genericness is on the Examining Attorney by “clear evidence.” In re Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 828 F.2d 1567, 4 USPQ2d 1141, 1143 (Fed. Cir. 1987); In re Gould Paper Corp., 834 F.2d 1017, 5 USPQ2d 1110, 1111 (Fed. Cir. 1987). Applicant respectfully submits that the evidence submitted by the Examining Attorney falls well short of meeting this burden. As explained in the prior response, the majority of the evidence submitted by the Examining Attorney comes from one source, a blog entry which is written by an individual with no evident expertise or qualifications on the issue. Much of the other evidence provided is from the web sites of animal rights groups, nutritional blogs, news sources, and others who may have encountered the term FREE ROAMING in connection with Applicant’s products and not have realized it is a distinctive mark belonging to Applicant.

Notably, however, the Examining Attorney has produced almost no evidence showing the use of FREE ROAMING by other companies to describe their eggs or dairy products. As the Board explained in the In re Trek International case, “where the evidence of record does not show that competitors use the designation in issue, this may create doubt . . . as to whether a term primarily refers to a genus of goods such that “sellers of competing brands cannot compete effectively without using the name to designate the product they are selling” (quoting Ty Inc. v. Softbelly’s Inc. , 353 F.3d 528 (7th Cir. 2003)).

In that case, although the Examining Attorney submitted numerous articles showing usage of the term “thumbdrive” to refer to small, portable USB drives, the Board found that the Examining Attorney had failed to establish that the mark THUMBDRIVE was generic. Among other factors, the Board noted that the applicant had been the party to coin this term, that competitors typically used the term “flash drive” as the generic name for the goods, and that “thumb drive” was not defined in dictionaries. All of those factors are also present in this case. Applicant was the first company to use the term FREE ROAMING (Exhibit 1), the term FREE ROAMING is not defined in dictionaries (Exhibits 11-13), and Applicant has provided evidence showing that its competitors almost always use the terms “free range” or “cage free” to identify the products at issue (Exhibits 14-17).

There is simply no evidence that other food products companies have a “competitive need” to use the term FREE ROAMING. The Examining Attorney has cited the web pages of food products companies Rose Acre and Lake Meadow, both of which use the term FREE ROAMING. However, the Rose Acre web page actually uses “cage free” as the generic term for the goods, and appears to use FREE ROAMING more as a trademark or source identifier, which would be an infringement upon Applicant’s rights. The Lake Meadow web page describes the eggs as “cage free, free range, free roaming, and locally produced.” The fact that this company uses several different terms to describe the eggs suggests that these are descriptive adjectives rather than a generic name for the products. In any event, the fact that it also uses “cage free” and “free range” clearly indicates that there is no ‘competitive need’ for this company to use FREE ROAMING.

As in the Trek 2000 International case, the evidence provided by the Examining Attorney simply does not prove by “clear evidence” that FREE ROAMING is generic:

While the record includes a few examples of online retailers using the term THUMBDRIVE or THUMB DRIVE in a generic manner, it is quite noticeable that there are no examples of competitors using this term, and applicant submitted excerpts from competitors’ web sites showing the absence of that term and the use of “flash drive” as the name of the goods. In other words, the evidence does not ‘demonstrate a competitive need for others to use’ this term.

Therefore, for the reasons set forth above, Applicant respectfully requests reconsideration and withdrawal of the genericness refusal.

Request for Reconsideration after Final Action To the Commissioner for Trademarks:

Application serial no. 85160405 has been amended as follows:

ARGUMENT(S)

In response to the substantive refusal(s), please note the following:

The Examining Attorney has issued a final refusal of the mark FREE ROAMING on the grounds that it is allegedly generic. For the reasons set forth herein, Applicant respectfully requests reconsideration and withdrawal of the genericness refusal.

The term FREE ROAMING is not generic because it is not commonly understood by the public as the name for a genus of goods or services. To the extent that there is a commonly understood name for eggs or dairy products that come from animals which are allowed to graze free outside of enclosures, that name is “free range,” not “free roaming.” This is explained in the attached Declaration of John Brzenzski (Exhibit 1), Applicant’s President, who has significant experience in the food industry. As Mr. Brzenzski explains, Applicant was the first company in the industry to use the term FREE ROAMING to refer to chicken and dairy products. Other companies almost always use the term “free range,” or in some cases “cage-free,” to refer to these types of products.

The statements in Mr. Brzenzski’s declaration is supported by the fact that a Google search for “free range” reveals over 7,500,000 results (Exhibit 2), while a Google search for “free roaming” reveals only 1,810,000 results, most of which are related to mobile phone roaming, computer games, or other topics having nothing to do with chickens, eggs, or dairy products (Exhibit 3). Likewise, a search for “free range eggs” reveals over 1,540,000 results (Exhibit 4), whereas a search for “free roaming eggs” has only 46,900 hits (Exhibit 5), many of which relate to Applicant and Applicant’s products. The evidence regarding dairy products is even stronger: there are over 40,000 hits for “free range milk” (Exhibit 6) but only 565 hits for “free roaming milk” (Exhibit 7), the overwhelming majority of which refer to Applicant's products.

The dictionary definitions, and lack thereof, also demonstrate that the only generic term commonly recognized by consumers for these types of food products is “free range.” The Merriam-Webster English Dictionary, the Cambridge English Dictionary, and Dictionary.com (based on the Random House Dictionary) all contain definitions for “free range” (Exhibits 8-10). However, none of these dictionaries contain definitions for “free roaming” (Exhibits 11-13).

Finally, the fact that the common generic term for the products at issue is “free range” is also shown by the web sites of Applicant’s competitors, which almost always use “free range” (or in some cases “cage free”) to identify the products. Applicant is attaching printouts from the web pages of Rocklands Farm, Chino Valley Ranchers, Farmer’s Harvest, and Eatwell Farm, all of which use the term “free range” to identify the types of eggs at issue (Exhibits 14-17).

Therefore, if any generic name exists for eggs and dairy products that come from animals kept outside of enclosures, that term is “free range,” not FREE ROAMING. See California Cooler, Inc. v. Loretto Winery, Inc., 774 F.2d 1451, 1455 (9th Cir. 1985) (finding that CALIFORNIA COOLER was not generic because “if any generic term exists for such a beverage, it is ‘wine cooler’”); In re Trek 2000 International Ltd., 97 USPQ2d 1106 (TTAB 2010) (finding that THUMBDRIVE was not generic where “the record shows that ‘flash drive’ is the commonly used term of art for these portable digital storage devices”); In re Harte Hanks, Inc., Serial No. 77/071,666 (TTAB July 30, 2010) (finding that THE FLYER for advertising newspapers was not generic because the commonly recognized generic name for these goods was “shoppers”). Although the Examining Attorney notes that in some cases there can be more than one generic name for a particular genus, in this case there is simply no evidence that FREE ROAMING is understood by consumers to refer to the genus of goods or services at issue, which are overwhelmingly referred to as “free range” rather than FREE ROAMING.

The term FREE ROAMING is not a generic noun, but rather an indication of source referring exclusively or almost exclusively to Applicant’s products, or at most an adjective describing the nature or characteristics of the goods. It is therefore entirely unlike the cases cited by the Examining Attorney, in which various nouns which are clearly the common name for a class of goods or services have been found to be generic.

The Examining Attorney has argued that genericness is not limited to nouns, and that an adjective can be generic if the adjective refers to the relevant genus or category of goods and/or services. Although this is true, it is extremely rare for an adjective to be found generic. The cases cited by the Examining Attorney do not support his position, since the terms at issue in those cases (BUNDT and ATTIC) are both nouns. The term BUNDT in “bundt cake” (from the In re Northland Aluminum case), is not an adjective but an attributive noun or a noun adjunct, i.e. a noun that modifies another noun. Likewise, the term ATTIC in “attic sprinkler” is not an adjective, but a noun that limits and clarifies the noun “sprinkler.” In fact, the TMEP cites only one case in which an adjective has been found to be descriptive (PERMA PRESS). TMEP § 1209.01(c)(ii). This is because in most cases, adjectives are descriptive rather than generic, since they describe a feature, characteristic, or quality of the goods or services, rather than functioning as the commonly understood name for a genus of goods or services. See Magic Wand, Inc. v. RDB, Inc., 940 F.2d 638 (Fed. Cir. 1991) (finding that TOUCHLESS for automobile washing services was descriptive rather than generic).

Applicant also notes that the burden to establish genericness is on the Examining Attorney by “clear evidence.” In re Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 828 F.2d 1567, 4 USPQ2d 1141, 1143 (Fed. Cir. 1987); In re Gould Paper Corp., 834 F.2d 1017, 5 USPQ2d 1110, 1111 (Fed. Cir. 1987). Applicant respectfully submits that the evidence submitted by the Examining Attorney falls well short of meeting this burden. As explained in the prior response, the majority of the evidence submitted by the Examining Attorney comes from one source, a blog entry which is written by an individual with no evident expertise or qualifications on the issue. Much of the other evidence provided is from the web sites of animal rights groups, nutritional blogs, news sources, and others who may have encountered the term FREE ROAMING in connection with Applicant’s products and not have realized it is a distinctive mark belonging to Applicant.

Notably, however, the Examining Attorney has produced almost no evidence showing the use of FREE ROAMING by other companies to describe their eggs or dairy products. As the Board explained in the In re Trek International case, “where the evidence of record does not show that competitors use the designation in issue, this may create doubt . . . as to whether a term primarily refers to a genus of goods such that “sellers of competing brands cannot compete effectively without using the name to designate the product they are selling” (quoting Ty Inc. v. Softbelly’s Inc., 353

F.3d 528 (7th Cir. 2003)).

In that case, although the Examining Attorney submitted numerous articles showing usage of the term “thumbdrive” to refer to small, portable USB drives, the Board found that the Examining Attorney had failed to establish that the mark THUMBDRIVE was generic. Among other factors, the Board noted that the applicant had been the party to coin this term, that competitors typically used the term “flash drive” as the generic name for the goods, and that “thumb drive” was not defined in dictionaries. All of those factors are also present in this case. Applicant was the first company to use the term FREE ROAMING (Exhibit 1), the term FREE ROAMING is not defined in dictionaries (Exhibits 11-13), and Applicant has provided evidence showing that its competitors almost always use the terms “free range” or “cage free” to identify the products at issue (Exhibits 14-17).

There is simply no evidence that other food products companies have a “competitive need” to use the term FREE ROAMING. The Examining Attorney has cited the web pages of food products companies Rose Acre and Lake Meadow, both of which use the term FREE ROAMING. However, the Rose Acre web page actually uses “cage free” as the generic term for the goods, and appears to use FREE ROAMING more as a trademark or source identifier, which would be an infringement upon Applicant’s rights. The Lake Meadow web page describes the eggs as “cage free, free range, free roaming, and locally produced.” The fact that this company uses several different terms to describe the eggs suggests that these are descriptive adjectives rather than a generic name for the products. In any event, the fact that it also uses “cage free” and “free range” clearly indicates that there is no ‘competitive need’ for this company to use FREE ROAMING.

As in the Trek 2000 International case, the evidence provided by the Examining Attorney simply does not prove by “clear evidence” that FREE ROAMING is generic:

While the record includes a few examples of online retailers using the term THUMBDRIVE or THUMB DRIVE in a generic manner, it is quite noticeable that there are no examples of competitors using this term, and applicant submitted excerpts from competitors’ web sites showing the absence of that term and the use of “flash drive” as the name of the goods. In other words, the evidence does not ‘demonstrate a competitive need for others to use’ this term.

Therefore, for the reasons set forth above, Applicant respectfully requests reconsideration and withdrawal of the genericness refusal.

IN THE UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE

In re Application of :
Born Free Foods, LLC :
Filed: October 25, 2010 : Frank L. Lattuca
: Examining Attorney
: Law Office 109
Serial No.: 85/160,405 :
Mark: FREE ROAMING :
Attorney Docket No.: 1034133-000087 :

DECLARATION OF JOHN BRZEZENSKI

I, John Brzezinski, being hereby warned that willful false statements and the like so made are punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, under Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code and that such willful false statements may jeopardize the validity of this document, declare as follows:

1. I am President for BF Agricultural Acquisition, LLC d/b/a Born Free Foods, LLC (hereinafter "Born Free Foods"), formerly known as Radlo Foods, LLC, the owner of Application Serial No. 85/160,405. I have worked for Born Free Foods for 3 years, and have worked in the food industry for 8 years. I have significant knowledge and personal experience in the field of food products, including eggs and dairy products.

2. Born Free Foods selected the FREE ROAMING mark in or around September of 2010. At the time, Born Free Foods was not aware of any other companies using the term FREE ROAMING to refer to eggs or dairy products.

3. To the best of my knowledge, Born Free Foods was the first company to use the term

FREE ROAMING in connection with eggs and dairy products. Born Free Foods has used this term since at least as early as 2011.

4. To the best of my knowledge, Born Free Foods is the only company making any ongoing, sustained use of the term FREE ROAMING in connection with eggs and dairy products. Any use of FREE ROAMING by companies other than Born Free Foods is de minimis and constitutes an infringement upon Born Free Foods' prior rights.

5. Born Free Foods has always used FREE ROAMING as a trademark to identify the source of its goods (including using the proper TM markings), and never as a generic term to identify a genus or class of goods.

6. Based upon my experience in the food industry, the general public does not understand the term FREE ROAMING to be a term referring to a genus of goods, and does not primarily use the term FREE ROAMING to refer to eggs, dairy, and other food products that come from animals which are raised outside of enclosures.

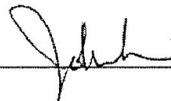

7. To the extent that there is a generic term referring to eggs, dairy, and other food products that come from animals which are permitted to graze or forage for food, rather than being confined to enclosures, that term is "free range."

8. The term "free range" is defined by the USDA, is defined in several dictionaries, and is used by a wide range of food companies to describe their products. The term "cage free" is also sometimes used by other food companies to describe food products that come from free-range animals. However, food companies other than Born Free Foods do not generally use "free roaming" to identify these products.

9. Therefore, based upon my experience in the industry, consumers do not understand FREE

ROAMING to be a generic term for a genus of goods, but rather a distinctive mark referring to Born Free Foods' products.

10. I declare under the penalty of perjury pursuant to the laws of the United States, that all statements made herein of my own knowledge are true and all statements made herein on information and belief are believed to be true.

The free-range eggs speak for themselves. Crack one open for breakfast and you'll instantly see the difference: a dark yellow yolk full of nutrients, high-seated whites while cooking, and a rich taste you'll love from the first bite. They are $5.00 for a dozen for extra-large "rainbow eggs" (dark brown, brown, white & turquoise eggs).

Our free-range eggs are laid, gathered, washed and packed daily. What you might find at the farmers market or local retail markets are as fresh of eggs as you'll find in the area. The chickens have ample space to run around and scratch, as well as plenty of laying boxes where they feel safe and comfortable. They also roost within the mobile coop, above the laying boxes, for extra safety at night.

Our eggs can be purchased at our Farm Market on Saturdays, the Potomac Village Farmers Market on Thursdays, or at Glover Park Farmers Market on Saturdays.

ORGANIC

Chino Valley Ranchers' farm-fresh certified cage free organic Free-Range Eggs are produced by hens that are fed the finest organic grown grains. On our farm we run our own feedmill to ensure the highest quality feed gets to our birds. Certified by CCOF, our organic grain fed hens live on a free-range farm with fresh, clean air, free from city noise and pollutants. To deliver the best organic eggs, we also keep our ranches free from pesticides to prevent any of these chemicals to enter the hens' living space, which helps us bring you California's best organic eggs. In this environment, our hens are able to eat, exercise, and socialize as they like. Our organic eggs, soy free eggs, cage free eggs, and other varieties are gathered daily from nests to ensure freshness, and are packed in 100% recycled cartons using soy ink that is friendly to our environment.

Eggs

Pasture-Raised and Truly Free-Range

Our hens have houses for shelter, and they go in and out as they please. They are not debeaked like most commercial layers and have 20 acres of land to scratch and peck each year.

These eggs are completely different from supermarket eggs, both in flavor and nutrition. Test results on eggs raised on pasture show less cholesterol and much higher levels of Omega-3 fatty acids, as well as a number of important micro-nutrients difficult to get from other natural sources. The eggs are laid only days before you get them. They stand up high when you break them, have a beautifully bright orange yolk, tender whites, and a rich and grassy taste. Try them, and you'll never want to go back ...

Mother Earth News tested fourteen flocks like ours. See for yourself how good these eggs are.

Thanks for supporting sustainable agriculture!

About Our Eggs:

- Pasture-raised: unlimited access to pasture on Eatwell Farm
- Cruelty-free: not debeaked, never caged, no forced molting
- Diet made from a mixture of certified organic feed, organic wheat which we soak and sprout, organic produce trimmings from the farm, clover pasture, insects and worms in their pasture
- Extremely fresh-laid only a few days before they come to you
- Naturally brown shells
- May be fertile: there are roosters in the fields with the hens. However, there aren't enough to guarantee fertilization. Some of the eggs are fertile, while others are not.

- Available for delivery to Eatwell Farm CSA box members. With your produce box deliveries, you may also choose to receive a dozen eggs (at $8 each) or a half dozen eggs (at $4 each). Email organic@eatwell.com or call 866.627.2465.

You may only receive our egg deliveries if you are also receiving produce boxes. Your eggs and produce must be on the same delivery schedule.

When we have enough eggs, we also sell them at the Ferry Plaza Market in San Francisco on Saturdays 8 a.m.- 2 p.m. and at Rainbow Grocery in San Francisco.
