...six live moments to her – or his? – grand debut, the next heir to the British throne is already kicking up its heels. So revealed a chatty and effusive princess Kate on her March 5 solo outing, bringing cheer to the old English fishing town of Grimsby. “Has the baby been moving?” asked resident Bobbie Brown, 42, outside the port’s museum. “Yes, it is, very much so!” replied Kate, 31. To Claire Moss-Smith, 86, who said she was eager for Kate to be queen, the princess answered, smiling, “You might be waiting a long time!”

Just back from a weekend in Switzerland with Princes William and Harry, Kate was in high spirits on her walkabout from Grimsby’s fishing museum – “so authentic,” she gushed. “The smells and the noises” – to a high school and fire station, where she met young people getting job training through a charity set up by Prince Charles.

Along the way, she “had a lovely rapport with the children,” said Mayor Mike Burton. “She was getting lots of offers of babysitting.” But in all the easy banter of her outing, did the duchess let some big news slip? “The lady next to me gave Kate a teddy bear,” recalls Grimsby’s Sandra Cook, 67. “and I distinctly heard her say, ‘Thank you, I will take that for my d-’.” then she stopped herself. I said to her, “You were going to say daughter, weren’t you?” She said, “No, we don’t know.” I said, “Oh, I think you do,” to which she said, “We’re not telling.”

And so, we await a July delivery of news.

She does have dogs, and dogs like toys too. Anyways, I like not knowing, it is exciting. Boy or girl, who cares. They are able to have a baby and take care of it. Whatever the sex of the baby it will be the most loved I'm sure.
