Salary

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the median salary for BMETs in May 2010 was $44,500. The highest-paid 10% earned more than $70,260 a year.

BMET salaries vary by work setting. Retail suppliers usually pay the least while wholesalers pay above average wages. The best-paid jobs are found in hospitals and health systems. Salary tends to increase with education, training and certification.

Job Outlook

The job outlook for BMETs is excellent. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment is expected to grow by 31 percent between 2010 and 2020. The aging of U.S. population will largely drive this growth. It will increase the demand for medical care in coming decades. BMETs are rarely laid off or outsourced and enjoy excellent job security.

Top workplaces for BMETs include hospitals and medical equipment suppliers. Demand is greatest for BMETs with Associate's degrees in biomedical engineering or biomedical equipment technology. Technicians also improve their employment opportunities by relocating to shortage areas (particularly rural areas).
