"Shiraz and McLaren Vale". What a famous pairing. Are there others? The Royal Family and Corgis? Gin and Tonic? Bogart and Bacall? But why the connection? Pedigree and history; the variety has shown its suitability for so long to the region's maritime but warm climate, and old yet well-preserved soils, that it's hard to imagine one without the other. Shiraz in McLaren Vale grows well, always ripens, and with correct vineyard management, produces wines of great depth, flavour and structure.

Wine Shop

Shop for wine online, and find thousands of red and white wines from all over the world. Just over 19 million acres of the world's surface is planted with grape vines. The grape vine tolerates a fairly narrow climatic range. It needs a growing season long enough to complete the fruiting cycle and a period of winter cold enough to force the vine into dormancy. It needs certain amounts of warmth and daylight. It is a plant of temperate zones. These conditions are found in the two bands between latitudes 30-degrees and 50-degrees north and south.
