Mark: 3 BADGE BEVERAGE CORPORATION
Serial No. 86-549,026
Response to Office Action dated November 23, 2015

Section 2(d) Refusal Should Be Withdrawn

In an office action dated November 23, 2015, the refusal to register Applicant's mark has been continued based on the prior registration of BADGE for use on wine. As discussed below, the continued refusal is contrary to recent Federal Circuit case law. It is also fundamentally inconsistent with how the Trademark Office has assessed similarly situated marks.

Applicant incorporates and reasserts the legal discussion set forth in its response to the first office action issued in this Application.

The Refusal Is Contrary to Federal Circuit Law

"[T]he similarity or dissimilarity of marks should be compared 'in their entirety as to appearance, sound, connotation and commercial impression.' In Re E.I. Dupont DeNemours & Co., 476 F.2d 1357, 1361 (C.C.P.A. 1973). '[M]arks must be viewed 'in their entirety,' and it is improper to dissect a mark when engaging in this analysis....' In re Viterro Inc., 671 F.3d 1358, 1362 (Fed. Cir. 2012)." Jack Wolfskin Ausrüstung Fur Draussen GmbH & Co. KGAA v. New Millennium Sports, S.L.U., 797 F.3d 1363, 1371 (Fed. Cir. 2015). "Finally, the Board may 'state that, for rational reasons, more or less weight has been given to a particular feature of the mark.' Packard Press, Inc. v. Hewlett-Packard Co., 227 F.3d 1352, 1357 (Fed. Cir. 2000). Even so, the touchstone of this factor is consideration of the marks in total. Id.; see also Juice Generation, Inc. v. GS Enters. LLC, 794 F.3d 1334, 1340 (Fed. Cir. 2015) (explaining that this factor 'merely requires heeding the common-sense fact that the message of a whole phrase may well not be adequately captured by a dissection and recombination')." Id. (emphasis added)

In the recent Federal Circuit decision of Juice Generation, supra, the Court emphasized the requirement of assessing each mark in its entirety. 794 F.3d at 1337. In assessing the marks at issue there, the Board had relied on an analysis similar to the one presented in the office actions for this Application. It had identified a portion of the mark to be generic, declared another portion of the mark to be dominant and concluded the elements did not serve to distinguish the mark. Id. The Board had further observed that the subject marks were in standard character form and not limited by font, size or color. Id.

In reversing the Board's decision, the Federal Circuit was critical of the Board's analysis stating that the Board had "paid insufficient heed" to the important principle of the requirement that marks be assessed in their entirety. Id. at 1341. The Board had found "PEACE LOVE" as the "dominant" portion of the cited mark, compared that portion to the applicant's "PEACE & LOVE" phrase, found that they are "virtually identical," and then concluded that "the additional disclaimed word 'JUICE' did not serve to sufficiently distinguish" the applicant's mark from the cited mark. Id. Critically, the Federal Circuit unequivocally stated "[t]hat analysis is inadequate." Id. (emphasis added).

Here, the office action takes a similar approach to that rejected by the Juice Generation Court. The words BEVERAGE CORPORATION have been disregarded from the analysis because it is descriptive. The additional element of the number "3" has also been given little to no weight in distinguishing the marks. The office action asserts that “the average consumer would likely recall the mark as 3 BADGE or BADGE.”

Serial No. 86-549,026
Response to Office Action dated November 23, 2015

In doing so, the analysis set forth in the office action improperly reduces Applicant’s mark to simply “badge” by relying on the virtually identical analysis rejected by the Federal Circuit in its Juice Generation decision. Critically, the analysis of the office action fails to assess Applicant's mark, which is a four word phrase, in its entirety. As a result, the office action incorrectly continues to refuse registration under §2(d).

To begin the analysis, a four word phrase has a materially different visual presentation than just one word. It includes the inherently distinct number 3 and the descriptive elements “Beverage Corporation.” The presence of these 3 additional elements in the mark provides a fundamentally different view for consumers. Applicant’s mark is not “badge.” Applicant’s mark is 3 BADGE BEVERAGE CORPORATION. All of these elements are part of the mark. Even assuming some elements of this mark are descriptive, the correct analysis is to include all four elements, the mark in its entirety, when assessing whether confusion is likely.

Applying a similar analysis to sound, the 3 additional literal elements in the mark also causes the aural presentation of the mark to be different. Applicant's mark begins with a distinctive element that is not present in the cited mark and concludes with two elements that are not present in Applicant's mark. Moreover, the mark presents alliteration in the middle with “badge beverage” - another aspect of this mark that will be distinctive for consumers.

Applicant's mark also creates a distinct commercial impression because it is a four word phrase and not a single word in isolation. Taken in its entirety, the mark is a reference to a "beverage corporation". It is the 3 Badge Beverage Corporation. The cited mark, as a single word applied to a wine product, does not and cannot create an impression of referring to a beverage corporation. Moreover, the use of the number 3 creates the added impression of multiple badges. This is quantitatively and qualitatively different from a single badge. The cited mark is unambiguously singular and can never be plural. As a result, the commercial impression of the Applicant's mark is distinct from the cited registration. Applying the teaching of the Federal Circuit in its Juice Generation decision, the examining attorney should conclude the marks are sufficiently dissimilar that confusion is not likely. The refusal to register under §2(d) should be withdrawn.

The Refusal Is Inconsistent With Trademark Office Practice

The refusal of Applicant's Application is inconsistent with prior Trademark Office practice. First, two other pending "badge" applications have been assessed differently. In addition, the refusal is fundamentally inconsistent with how the Trademark Office has assessed many other marks that contain a common element but differ based on the addition of a numerical element.

During the pendency of Applicant's Application, the Trademark Office has allowed two other "badge" marks used on alcoholic beverages to be approved for publication. These marks, approved concurrent with Applicant’s pending Application, are more similar to the cited mark than Applicant's mark. First, as noted in Applicant's response to the initial office action, the Trademark Office approved for publication the application of BADGE 1 MOONSHINE for use on distilled spirits.¹ While the application is now abandoned, the key issue is that the Trademark Office approved for publication a mark that begins with "badge," includes a distinctive numerical element as well as a descriptive element, and is used on distilled spirits.

In addition, since Applicant filed its response to the initial office action, the Trademark Office has also approved for publication the application of THE BADGE HONEY BLONDE for use on beer. (See attached TSDR record.) Similar to "moonshine" in the other application, the words "honey blonde" are disclaimed because it is highly descriptive of a kind of beer. This mark has been approved for publication and the actual publication date is less than 3 weeks away on May 24, 2016.

Taken together, of the three applications that have been filed since August 2014 that include "badge" as an element and for use on an alcoholic beverage, two of the three have been approved for publication. There should be no dispute that the two marks which have been approved are no more dissimilar from the cited mark than Applicant's mark. Given that the Trademark Office has previously approved these two marks for publication, consistency and equity validates the analysis above which concludes that Applicant's mark should be approved for publication.²

The refusal of Applicant's application under §2(d) is also fundamentally inconsistent with how the Trademark Office has treated numerous prior marks which contain identical elements but differ in the use of a numerical element. The chart below lists the marks which Applicant was able to identify with a simple search of the TESS database. The common element in most of these marks is equally distinctive in relation to alcoholic beverages as is "badge." The chart is restricted to "live" records and marks used on alcoholic beverages. Presumably, a search with broader criteria would produce more examples where the Trademark Office has permitted the registration of these kinds of marks.

The marks in the table below are listed in order by the filing date of the application. A copy of the TSDR record for each mark cited in the chart is submitted with this response.

¹ Based on the analysis set forth in both office actions issued in this Application, there is no dispute that different types of alcoholic beverages are considered related goods under the examining attorney's analysis.

² The fact that these application have not matured into a registration is not material. Applicant here simply seeks the same equity that was given to these other applicants with their application approved for publication.

As demonstrated by the chart above, the Trademark Office has both recently and historically registered marks that are used on alcoholic beverages where the marks contain an identical element and are distinguished by a numeric element. For each of these marks, the common element is distinctive in relation to alcoholic beverages. A review of the TSDR records shows that virtually all these marks were registered without objection by the Trademark Office. No refusal was issued; no consent agreement was needed. Moreover, as noted above, this chart is a subset of marks which follow this pattern. It is limited to those marks which were found by a simple search of TESS and restricted to alcoholic beverages. Broaden the search criteria and the chart would grow significantly.

Mark: 3 BADGE BEVERAGE CORPORATION
Serial No. 86-549,026
Response to Office Action dated November 23, 2015

Conclusion

Applicant has established that its mark is not similar to, and creates a distinct commercial impression from, the cited registration. This conclusion is consistent with recent Federal Circuit law. Applicant has also amply demonstrated that the refusal is fundamentally inconsistent with the prior practices of the Trademark Office. This evidence validates the analysis that confusion is not likely. Applicant respectfully requests the refusal to register under Section 2(d) be withdrawn and the application approved for publication.
