 ... Aromatherapy is gradually moving away from its niche market origins as a number of major multinationals and supermarkets enter the market. From small-scale production and distribution to health and specialty outlets, the rapid growth of the aromatherapy market has now attracted larger operators, such as Coty, Lancome, and L'Oreal. This has seen a proliferation in the range of mass-market and private-label products offered, and made aromatherapy more accessible to the consumer, both in terms of distribution and familiarity with trusted brand names. The growth of the Internet offers another potential distribution channel, enabling smaller manufacturers to expand consumer base. ...
