Omaha

Nothing.

Omaha doesn't always get the credit it deserves for simply being an interesting place. And it is the nature of the unusually amiable sorts here not to make a big deal out of the slight, or much else for that matter.

The city, though, has so much to brag about were it the bragging sort of place.

Tucked up against the Missouri River to the East and the beginnings of the Great Plains to the West, the Nebraska community & has just been going about its business for 150 years. They say there's 400,000 people here, but you have to wonder where they all are.

The place seems so quiet for a city its size. And for one with so much to attract folks from across the region and elsewhere. It is the center, in so many ways, of a vast landscape that encompasses urban sprawl, quite simply enormous farms (marked everywhere by signature windmills), surprisingly rolling and green, Ireland-like hills, a vital, continent-opening riverway.

It is the commercial locus of the region and has been for a century and a half. Railroads began and ended here. Insurance, investment and banking are huge players in the national scene. Whether affecting the Wall Street markets or filling its own weekend produce markets and the Old Market warren of antiques shops, clothing stalls and food and more food (the blocks-square complex is lined above from end to end with flower boxes; neat), Omaha makes its influence felt.

But it is not the big shots and financial A heavies who define the place. Instead, it is the work-a-day folk who make the place go that count the most. Say "thank you," "say "hello," smile or acknowledge some local pleasantry and you will be met with a pleasant, "You betcha."

More, its pivotal role in the history of the nation's growth westward makes it a must-see for anyone appreciating the vastness of the land and the enormous forces that funneled from this way and that way through greater Omaha.

Cattle drives brought beef here — and the image and reality of fine food remain constant, long after the cowboys have gone. Lewis and Clark wandered by. The Mormons camped here on their way to Utah. Boys Town ("He's not heavy, he's my brother") is here. It was the crossroads to western expansion. The Gallup polisters have their headquarters here. So, too, the Air Force's Stratecic Zi Air Command and the Union Pacific railroad. The practice continues here to paint the name of your company on the side of your building.

``Omaha" comes from an Indian word meaning the ``above all others on a stream" – another succinct distinction from eastern practices, where ``above all others on a stream" would be rendered, ``Quintapausaukeegussettanut" or somesuch.

Wide, orderly streets seem to lead you from place to place with ease, except that, in an apparent gesture to $\underline{\text{New England }} \mathcal{C}^{3}$ traffic patterns, the streets seem to end for no reason, turn into one-ways willy-nilly and often make it a maze to negotiate getting from here to there.

When the ``there" is Johnny's Cafe, the famous steakhouse, for example, the route changes direction, runs into a highway and, with a final corkscrew dash, requires turn after turn to get about 150 feet *. When the destination is Johnny's, you don't mind the maze.

Omaha is known for its beef, of course. It might just as well be known for its museums, historical landmarks, universities \mathbb{Z}^3 , markets, baseball, outdoors, urban renewal, an architectural melange of old and less-old, a growing music scene, river and winter activities and, so important, its people.

Possibly there's something in the water hereabouts that helps inspire so many folks to shine. Consider just some of the luminaries who are from Omaha: Bob Gibson. Fred Astaire. Gerald Ford. Malcolm X. Nick Nolte. Paula Zahn. Marlon Brando. Dorothy McGuire. Warren Buffett. Max Baer. Montgomery Clift. Paul Williams. Standing Bear. Throw in the rest of the state, where there are no such concentrations of people but concentrations of celebrity and accomplishment (Henry Fonda, Dick Cavett, Grover Cleveland Alexander, James Coburn, Hoot Gibson, Sandy Dennis, Darryl F. Zanuck) and you have a per-capita star factory of extraordinary success.

Probably someone can count, too, the famous baseball players who played at the annual College World Series each June (including George Bush, the father), which features the best in the metal-bat sport . There's also what some consider a pretty good college football program at the University of Nebraska but that's in Lincoln, the state capital 60 miles to the southwest.

(Lincoln itself is a beautiful place: The state capitol building towers above all else, historical churches set a respectful tone, history quietly abounds. But the best sights are the lovely plots of wildflowers set against state office of buildings. So pretty. What a nice idea.)

Omaha Beef

Husker BBQ Catering - We use only the finest meats that are of the highest quality. This includes Omaha Beef and Pork. Our main meat entrees include Beef Brisket, Pork Ribs (Baby Back and St. Louis Style Ribs) and Pulled Pork. They are all cooked low-n-slow over a wood fire with our own special seasoning that leaves a juicy and flavorful experience in every bite! No corners are ever cut. We cook them for up to 20 hours at just the right temperature to bring you the most tender, juicy and flavorful meat you've ever sunk your teeth into.

What is 'quality meat' that we keep referring to when we talk about Omaha Beef and how we focus on quality versus quantity? A quality grade, which we look for in every piece of meat we purchase, is a composite evaluation of factors that affect palatability of meat (tenderness, juiciness, and flavor). These factors include carcass maturity, firmness, texture, and color of lean, as well as the amount and distribution of marbling within the lean. Beef carcass quality grading is based on (1) degree of marbling and (2) degree of maturity. Does this sound confusing? Well, that's why you leave it up to us to purchase and cook the finest meats for you. This is our specialty!

So, when looking for the finest BBQ meats that are full of flavor and are so tender and juicy that they literally fall apart upon touch, you know you will find it with Husker BBQ where we cater the best food guaranteed! Whether hosting Omaha Catering Services or Lincoln Catering events for your guests, you will not go hungry and you will not be disappointed. Our side dishes and desserts are a great compliment to the main entree selections for the best BBQ around. Our passion and fulfillment is knowing you are 100% satisfied with our food and services. For your next catering event, contact Staci Hayworth at www.huskerbbq.com or by phone at 402-312-3740. You may also click on contact Us and fill out a form or email us at catering@huskerbbq.com.

Omaha [1] (http://ci.omaha.ne.us/) is the largest city in the state of Nebraska, which is in the United States of America. It is on the Missouri River border with Iowa, along US Interstates 29 and 80.

Understand

Omaha is a unique city, as it has the highest number of millionaires per capita in the nation. Conversely, it also has one of the highest rates of African Americans living under the poverty line. It is still quite racially divided, with the affluent west side and Midtown being predominantly white, the south side Latino, and the northeast side African American.

Residents are universally friendly and polite, and Omaha has a well-deserved reputation for hospitality.

Omaha at Night

Omaha Convention & Visitors Bureau, [2] (http://www.visitomaha.com/). Official resource for events, attractions, hotels, restaurants, transportation, meetings and conventions and the film office. The Omaha Visitor Center is located in Downtown Omaha near the Old Market, at the southwest corner of 10th and Farnam Streets. The address is 1001 Farnam Street. Phone: 402-444-7762. Find information on all events, attractions, etc. and pick up a copy of the Omaha Visitors Guide.

Climate

Omaha has a four-season continental climate, typical of the Midwest. Summer is hot and muggy (mean July temp - 77

Climate	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sep	Oct	Nov	Dec
Daily highs (°F) Nightly lows (°F) Precipitation (in)	14	18	28	40	51	61	66	64	54	42	29	17 degrees F/25 C), and winter is cold and snowy (mean January temp - 24 degrees F/-4 C). Most precipitation falls in spring and summer, with an annual average of 31 inches (790 mm) and 101 days of measurable precipitation. Winter snowfall averages at 27 inches (69 cm), with 20 days of measurable snow.

Eat 🗲

It's said that Omaha has more restaraunts per capita than almost anywhere else in the world. Omaha and much of Nebraska are known for high quality corn-fed beef. All restaurants in Omaha are smoke-free indoors. Smoking on outdoor patios is legal, but rather uncommon. Below are a selection of locations to eat in Omaha.

Budget

- Amsterdam Falafel & Kebab, 620 N 50th Street, [82] (http://www.eatafk.com/). Very limited menu of just falafel, kebab and curry fries, served European style. Popular with the younger crowd. Can be very busy on Fridays and Saturdays with bar-goers in Dundee.
- Azteca, 9429 S 142nd Street. Mexican-American establishment. Sandwiched conveniently (nay, conspicuously) next to some of the region's finest interstate-side budgetels. Never mind the petrol fumes, this is one gem that can't be missed.
- California Tacos, 3235 California Street. Infamous midtown taqueria featuring "puffy-shell" tacos. Served by rotating shifts of neighborhood deziens, uniformed cops, and snobby bros from nearby Creighton University, it makes for a cheap place to take in some Omaha culture. Tables get scarce in the afternoon-4PM-5PM is half-off happy hour.
- Chopsticks House (Chopsticks House), 5522 North 103rd Street Omaha., 2 (402)-965-3333. $4 to $8 entrees. Tasty Chinese dishes. edit
- Dinker's Bar (Dinker's Bar), 2368 S 29th St, ≤ 402.342.9742. $5 to $7 burgers. Billed as the best burger in Omaha.. _{edit}
- Dundee Dell (The Dell), 5007 Underwood Ave. (Near 50th and Underwood, which is six blocks north of Dodge St.), (402)-553-9501 (dundeedell@dundeedell.com, fax: (402)-553-4010), [83] (http://dundeedell.com/). $6 to $14 entrees. See Bar section below for drink prices. Note: while the Dell is a restaurant, it is a very popular bar as well, especially on Friday and Saturday nights. If in doubt about the atmosphere, there are some other good restaurants nearby. It can also get busy on these nights. edit
- Katie's, 119 S 40th Street, [84] (http://aroundomaha.com/katies/index.html). Serves home-style Greek food.
- King Kong, Multiple locations, [85] (http://kingkongfastfood.com). Serves Greek food and is the home of the Triple-Kong burger. Free drinks with a student ID.

"This place is why its calle Omaha Beef"

Reviewed December 22, 2013

I have been here a few times - first when a baseball coach brought us team-members here...Bob Ross was they guy - one of the most generous men I ever met. He'd take guys out to eat to nice places like this and to Shoney's...this place Cascio's was a special treat and the decor reminded me of the ole gangster era. The prime rib was delicious and ribeye as well - I will alternate those cuts as long as I eat red meat.

If beef is what's for dinner, you cannot go wrong at Cascios.

When you think of GOURMET STEAKS from OMAHA, then use your imagination and think about a steak so tender, so juicy, and so lean that you will know you are in heaven. Stop for a moment and let that sink in for a while and remember you got them from Great American Farms. That sweet flavor of mild Filet Mignons wrapped with a delicious bacon, skewered on for easy cooking. It won't be hard to understand why it's the best! Also remember you got them from Great American Farms.

It's no secret that Omahans love to eat, and with more restaurants per capita in Omaha than in any other U.S. city, the Omaha metro supports a wide range of excellent establishments for dining and the list keeps growing. While Omaha is known for it's beef, nearly every type of cuisine can be found in the metro area, including top-notch Latin, Italian, Mexican, Thai, Chinese, Indian, Middle Eastern, Spanish, Continental and traditional American cuisine.

Food & Spirits Magazine, an award-winning Omaha metro publication showcases not only the food and spirits the area provides, but the unique experiences metro area restaurants, bars and lounges offer their clientele, and the dynamic people that are a part of the local industry.

Lach quarterly issue is packed with articles on food and wine, spirits trends and events, as well as tips and techniques from the chefs and other industry professionals working in these local establishments. The rich content found in each and every publication - all written by local experts - is backed by some of the finest photography Omaha has to offer, creating an experience that showcases food and spirits in all their splendor. Readers look to the Omaha Dining Guide section for a comprehensive, in-depth listing of restaurants, bars and lounges available in the area. Establishments are listed by location and mapped out on convenient Omaha area maps, making the choice of where to go out for a great meal or a cocktail easier than ever.

WHAT THE INDUSTRY HAS TO SAY

Omaha has more restaurants per capita than any other city in the nation. (Yahoo Travel).

The Omaha Metro area holds over 100 hotels, 1100 restaurants, 300 bars and lounges, and three casinos.

During a year, over two million visitors come to Omaha and stay at area motels.

Travelers spent over $3.1 billion in Nebraska during 2005 on trips away from home with overnight stays in paid accommodations and on day trips to places 100 miles or more away.

With the Henry Doorly Zoo, College World Series, Qwest Center and the casinos, the Omaha metro area houses many of the state's leading tourist attractions.

Nearly 50% of an Omaha visitor's average dollar is spent on lodging and food.

2011 restaurant sales in Nebraska were $2.1 billion.

CIRCULATION & DISTRIBUTION

Food & Spirits Magazine is distributed free of charge to Omaha metro hotels, restaurants, bars and other select locations, and at special events throughout the year.

Annual distribution numbers and pass-along rate: 200,000

Annual website visitors: 50,000 new and returning visitors each year. Presently, these readers come from all 50 states and 53 different countries.

REACH PEOPLE

Here at Food & Spirits Magazine, we believe that Omaha truly has one of the greatest restaurant and bar scenes in the country, and it is our goal to share that view with others. We aim to keep industry professionals informed, residents and visitors entertained, and everyone always wanting more.

Food & Spirits Magazine is gifted with a wide, varied target audience which focuses primarily on three groups: local residents, visitors and industry professionals. Content and advertising is geared toward these groups ensuring there is something for everyone each issue.

Local residents want to know what's going on in Omaha, and we pique their interest in restaurants and bars new to the area, as well as the more established, unique venues. Food & Spirits Magazine provides the content and insight into these restaurants, bars and other venues so residents can gain a personal knowledge into what the Omaha metro area has to offer.

Visitors will love the comprehensive listings, which are a great resource for finding where to go for a night out. Visitors spend a great deal of money at Omaha restaurants and bars, and we want them to have an unforgettable experience. By picking up Food & Spirits Magazine, visitors are introduced to the Omaha dining and bar scene in a unique way, and then carry it back to their home town or state, sharing it with others.

Industry professionals appreciate the content of Food & Spirits Magazine — written entirely by local experts. Our contributors include local chefs, general managers and the owners of restaurants and bars. We know as well as you do how busy the industry is, and our up-to-date, ever-changing content is a great way to keep on top of what is going on. Our "Comings and Goings" section highlights what is new and changing in the restaurant and bar scene, and we include local content that is applicable and interesting for those that make the Omaha scene what it is.

SEE RESULTS

At Food & Spirits Magazine, we make your advertising work. That's why you'll never see four ¼ page ads on a page. Instead, your ad will be showcased within relevant content. We also use creative, nontraditional advertising to best showcase our advertiser's products and property. There's no more effective way to showcase a beautiful dish than a stunning, full-page picture. Here at Food & Spirits, our focus is making your advertising work, and we know that if it doesn't work for you, it doesn't work for us.

TOTAL AUDIENCE MARKETING

At Food & Spirits Magazine, we know that it's important for our advertisers to communicate their message through multiple platforms - we also know that can be confusing. That's why when you are and FSM print advertiser we'll also share your message on our website and through our social media platforms.

SHELF LIFE

Unique to other publications in the area, Food & Spirits Magazine has a shelf life that is unrivaled for local publications. It's not unusual to see past copies sitting in restaurants and bars, or even on your coffee table, for months to years. We create the magazine so that it is always eye-catching and the articles are relevant anytime. The longer our issues stay in circulation, the more exposure your ad gets.

Welcome,

The Omaha Restaurant Association was established in 1944 as a non-profit organization to promote the highest standard of quality in the Omaha hospitality industry through leadership, scholarship, philanthropy and advocacy. We continue to work diligently to move our industry forward by providing the latest industry news, growing member benefits and giving back to the our community. Our growth is a direct reflection of the commitment by our members and our community partners. We encourage you to consider joining us and becoming a valued member of the ORA.

Dine Out Often,
Jennie Warren
ORA Executive Director

ORA History

The Omaha Restaurant Association began in 1944 with a small group of restaurateurs that met at the Castle Hotel. Seven faithful members agreed to serve on the first Board of Directors and began meeting every month to discuss the purpose of the ORA as well as the welfare of their members and of the hospitality industry, in general. One of the early purposes was to promote "eating out", and they did succeed, as Omaha is known to this day as a city of great food, and great restaurants...

In the early years, the ORA did not have paid staff, and was operated solely by the elected board. In the early 1980's that was changed by the Board, resulting in the hiring of Mr. Harold Norman to be the first Executive Director. Harold, with his wife Dorothy, were very instrumental in the growth, and stature of the ORA. Perhaps one of Harold's biggest achievements was the thousands of dollars he raised for scholarships. Upon Harold's retirement in 2000, Jennie Warren was named the new Executive Director and remains in that position 12 years later, as the ORA continues to thrive.

The ORA has served the community well through the promotion eating at Omaha's great restaurants. The ORA also works with many local groups and agencies to insure that Omaha is always known for great food and service. Some of the agencies the ORA has worked with include the Douglas County Health Department, the Nebraska Restaurant Association, The American Culinary Federation, and the Institute for the Culinary Arts at Metropolitan Community College.

The ORA has additionally served the residents of the area by offering scholarships to those outstanding individuals who are interested in making a career in the food industry.

What was once a committee of the ORA (The Scholarship Committee), in 1991 became the Omaha Restaurant Association Foundation (ORAF). It is now an affiliated but separate organization that promotes and distributes scholarships.

The ORA can look with pride at the reputation that Omaha restaurants have developed in the greater metro area. It is proud of its members who have risen to positions of national prominence. Perhaps unprecedented, the ORA has had three individuals who have gone on to be President of the National Restaurant Association. We owe a great debt of gratitude to these individuals, as well as all of those who have served on the ORA Board, especially our presidents, and our two Executive Directors. If not for their dedication, perhaps Omaha would not be so well known for its wonderful restaurants.

ORA Members that became National Restaurant Presidents: 1919-1920 John W. Welch, the First President

1959-1960 Raymond C. Matson, Hilltop House

1994-1995 Herman Cain, Godfather's Pizza, INC.

Overall

Glad it was on my corporate account

I wanted to impress a local downtown client of mine and was told to come here by our hotel bellman. After eating here my guess is that the bellman gets some sort of kickback from the restaurant for referring us over because he over emphasized that I should make sure that he sent us here for dinner. His hook was that we would get special treatment if we used his name so I took him up on it. Well, we certainly received special treatment. I felt like I got a complete waxing which I am glad to say did not come out of my personal account. With a $300 bill for two people I would have expected to come out smilling from ear to ear but instead left feeling like I was just robbed. I could write a paragraph on what I thought of the food quality but will simply say, don't bother.

Dine In Luxury

Omaha Prime is a perfect place for a leisurely luxury dinner. Servers enlighten their guests about the various cuts of beef and why their meat is a ""cut above"". Side dishes are served a la carte and are generously proportioned and perfect for sharing. Enjoy a glass of wine from their extensive wine list and appetizers, but leave room for dessert.

Located in the heart of the Old Market district, Omaha Prime is a real treat for the tastebuds. It's an experience you'll not soon forget.

Warren Buffet's Second Choice

A nice place in a good setting (the Old Market of Omaha). The steaks are big and juicy and the service is suitably midwestern--polite and helpful without being stuffy.

History

1920 - Upon his return from World War I, Herman Cohen mustered out of the U.S. Army with $100. Herman took his modest fortune to the stockyards in Omaha, NE and invested it in cattle. He worked out an arrangement with a partner in which Herman would buy cattle and sell the beef, while the partner sold the hides. Herman Cohen's word was his bond. It was this reputation that helped his business grow through the depression and on into the future.

1945 - Pennie Z. Davis joins his father-in-law, Herman Cohen, as a partner at Greater Omaha. Pennie would later become president of the company.

1973 - Upon graduation from the University of Denver, Henry Davis joins Greater Omaha to learn the beef business, under the tutelage of his father, Pennie Z. Davis.

1992 - Henry Davis, President of Greater Omaha, makes a key decision to move the company beyond its' past as a careass processor, and into the future as a boxed beef and value added processor. A fabrication facility is acquired and box beef production begins.

1994 - High Country Meats, a meat distribution company out of Denver, CO, is added to Greater Omaha's distribution team.

1996 - April - Trex Corporation, a global export company, is formed to grow Greater Omaha's market share worldwide.

1996 - September - The new Greater Omaha fabrication plant opens in April. This larger, modern, and more efficient processing facility allows an increase in daily production from 800 to 1400 head per day. The increased productions capacity allows Greater Omaha to compete more effectively in both national and global markets.

2000 - A new slaughter plant, adjacent to the Greater Omaha fabrication plant at 30th and L Street, opens in July. This expansion increases daily production capacity to 2400 head. Designed with an emphasis on food safety, humane handling, employee safety, and production efficiencies, the plant is a contemporary phenomenon.

2011 - Worldwide demand for Greater Omaha's product is staggering, and they are rapidly outgrowing their current facility. In order to accommodate the growing needs of their customers, another expansion is planned.

2012 - Construction gets underway on a 40,000 square foot addition to Greater Omaha's processing facility.

2013 - Construction is completed on the new addition. This expansion will enable Greater Omaha to further serve and supply their customers, now and on into the future.

BUSINESS ETHICS ALLIANCE"

An Interview with Henry Davis, President of Greater Omaha Packing and Son of Pennie Z. Davis

By: Charles N. Austin and Robert Mills Creighton University MBA Candidates

Greater Omaha Packing Company has been in the cattle processing business since 1920. It has grown from a small startup company into a company that now employs over 850 team members processing more than 2,400 head of cattle per day. Greater Omaha did not expand its business by accident; it was the vision and work of three generations starting with the founder of the company, Herman Cohen. We had the opportunity to sit down with Henry Davis to discuss the impact Pennie Z. Davis, his father, made upon him and the industry leader, Greater Omaha Packing Company, Inc.

What is your background and the history of Greater Omaha Packing?

Greater Omaha Packing was started in 1920 by my grandfather, Herman Cohen, who immigrated to the United States from Russia. My grandfather started the company and ran it for over 30 years until he sold it to my father, Pennie Z. Davis, who owned and operated the business for another 30 years. I attended Central High School and worked at the plant during summers while in high school and college. I graduated from the University of Denver in 1973, with a Bache2010 Omaha Chamber Hall of Fame Inductee lor of Science degree in business administration and immediately started my career with Greater Omaha Packing Company. In the mid 1980's, I became President of Greater Omaha Packing Company, which at that time was located at 26th and Q. In 1992, I began the transition of our company into a boxed beef and value added processor which led to the opening of our current location at 30th and L St. In 2000, we opened a new cattle harvesting plant that allowed us to increase production to 2,400 head a day of the highest quality steers and heifers which are marketed to more than 50 countries. We have an efficient and modern beef production facility which is focused on food safety, allowing us to compete in the global market.

What do you like most about your work?

"The people". I enjoy the people of Greater Omaha Packing Company. "They are all a part of the company." One may look at this business and see hundreds of thousands of square feet of plant and millions of dollars of equipment, but what I see are great people. My dad always understood that it was the people that made our company successful. He related to everyone very well.

Many employees would come to my dad and confide in him. They would talk to him about their family, their kids and their education. My dad always encouraged his employees and their family members to further their education, and pursue their dreams even if that meant they would leave Greater Omaha. He always encouraged people to better themselves through education. It was one of the wonderful ways my dad led his life.

What do you like least? What types of pressures do you see in your career?

There isn't anything I don't like about my business. I have such great people managing and operating the company. Smaller companies trying to grow have greater pressures that are unique to growth. I can say that there was more pressure when we were a smaller company. Throughout the years that I have witnessed, Greater Omaha has grown from 40 people to 850 people. When we were a smaller company, the pressures of doing it all included addressing HR issues, insurance issues, healthcare issues, sales, procurement, future growth and much, much more. As a business experiences growth, an owner must realize that you need to add competent people to assist you with the growth of the company as every aspect of running a growing business becomes more complicated. Time is very valuable as the business demands more of it. Now that I have the right people in place, the pressure has diminished. The beef industry is made up of four companies that comprise 84% of the market. Greater Omaha is the seventh largest producer of beef in the U.S. We are about 2% of the market and generate over $1 billion in domestic and international sales.

Very generally, when you think of ethics what does it mean to you?

Ethics is "conforming to acceptable standards". Everyone has their own interpretation as to what is ethical behavior; it is very subjective. I feel that my personal ethics were developed by seeing and modeling my father's actions, who "always did things right." My Dad treated people with respect and he demanded that he be treated the same. He set a high standard for everyone. Treating people fairly is not only the right thing to do, but it creates a great culture that leads to a high quality product, low turnover, an excellent safety record while maintaining competitive costs.

Has Greater Omaha Packing always been based out of Omaha? Do the moral values in The Ethical Legacy Project (Integrity, Community Responsibility, Accountability, Financial Vitality & Moral Courage) typify the Omaha business community?

Yes, Greater Omaha Packing has always been based in Omaha. I'm not familiar with the business practices of other Omaha companies. Doing business internationally with customers in over 50 countries does expose our business to customers and cultural ethics that are different when compared to those that are practiced in our country and here in the Midwest. Greater Omaha will not do business in countries or with customers, if agreements are of no value and commitments are not honored. It may be accepted business ethics in certain countries, but it is not acceptable to Greater Omaha.

Describe an ethical situation you have faced that was relatively easy to handle?

Back in the late 1990's, the federal government came out with the Basic Pilot Program, which allows employers to verify their employees' right to work in the United States. A pilot program was given to beef processing companies in the five states with the largest immigrant population, of which Nebraska was not one. The companies with plants in those states had software that could quickly check who had the right to work. These companies clearly had a hiring advantage. The beef companies in Omaha, who were unable to participate in the Basic Pilot Program, became a magnet for those applicants who did not have a legal right to work. I contacted then Senator Kerry of Nebraska to explain the situation which our company faced. He arranged a conference call with the Deputy Director of the Immigration and Naturalization Services, INS, Doris Misner, I explained my concern to Mrs. Misner about the problem that had been created by the INS. Shortly thereafter, all beef processing companies in Nebraska were allowed to utilize the Basic Pilot software program. This was an important ethical issue for me because I felt that all employers should have the same opportunity to hire those with a legal right to work in the U.S. and I felt that all employers should be using every available tool to only hire those with a legal right to work.

Do employees have a path to take if they see something unethical in your business?

Yes, we have an employee "open-door policy," within our company. If there is an issue, an employee is to discuss the situation with their supervisor first; if the employee is not satisfied with the outcome they may talk to the Vice President of the company and if they are still not satisfied they can come and talk with me. It is a very clear path for all employees to use. It is interesting to note that several years ago I put together a mission statement for the company. As the company grew I was unable to spend as much time with the management team as I wanted. In the past, standards were set by my As our company example. grew, I felt it was important to lay out a standard for all employees to follow, so I created a mission statement. All employees are instructed to follow the mission statement which is part of our orientation and our handbook. If they encounter a situation that is not addressed by our mission statement they are instructed to bring the issue directly to me. So far, I've never had anyone not be able to make a decision using our mission statement as the guide. The Mission Statement is stated in three sentences:

Greater Omaha Packing Company will produce the finest beef products in a manner that is uncompromising in food safety.

With that one statement, it is clear that if any employee has a concern for a product or process, they have to take action. We will not compromise food safety in any manner.

We will respect our customers and suppliers by treating them fairly with every commitment we make.

Our point is this — it does not matter what our customers or suppliers do on their end. On our end, we are always going to honor our commitments. We may choose to not do any further business with a customer or supplier, but we will always honor our commitments.

We will provide a proper work environment for everyone at Greater Omaha Packing Company and have an unyielding focus on the health. safety and betterment of our employees and their families.

I'm not familiar with the focus of other companies on their employees but that is what we do here. A few years ago, we opened up a free health clinic for all employees and their families staffed by bilingual UNMC doctors. I felt it was a very good benefit for our employees to offer a greater level of preventive health care; it fits our mission statement.

When you consider the wide variety of benefits you provide for your employees, how much is driven from the side of "this makes business sense" and how much from "this is the moral thing to do"?

That is the hardest business ethics question. We provide very low cost health care for all our employees and their families. We provide scholastic scholarships, a health fair at the Centurylink Center, a citizenship program for our employees with on-site ESL teachers four days a week and a summer family event at Funplex Waterpark. When fuel prices skyrocketed out of control a few years ago, we provided a cash fuel supplement to offset fuel expenses for our employees. Greater Omaha Packing spends a great deal of money to provide these programs. The value of these programs is strictly to assist our employees. It is impossible to measure the financial benefit to Greater Omaha from these programs. I know that I want to have the best workplace. The payback will come if our health care programs prevent a complicated birth, prevent a life threatening event by preventative health care and if our employees have healthier families. The payback has already been realized as Greater Omaha continues to attract the best in the industry.

Greater Omaha wouldn't have experienced success without its great team members and this community. Certainly you have to balance benefits with the financial success of the company.

I'll share with you an interesting occurrence — many times I've had the teachers that instruct our bilingual classes say to me; "Thank you for letting me teach at your plant". It's extremely satisfying to know that not only are our employees benefiting from these programs, but the instructors are impressed and feel like they have helped the community by the achievements of the participants.

Have you had an ethics mentor? If so, who and why?

My father was my mentor in many ways but certainly my mentor in ethics. He never had to sit down and tell me right and wrong, I saw what he did. I remember one time in the 1970's an employee that worked in the plant with me said, "You know, Henry, my son is going to be a manager at the Marriott national reservations center. I worked here, put my kids through school and your dad encouraged me to have my son go to college. My son has graduated from college, and starts his job next week". Here was a man who worked on the production line his whole life. He worked hard to provide for his family and accomplished his goals for both himself and his family. The employees' stories are much more valuable than the stories I'm telling you. Can you imagine the total impact of further education on the future generations of that family?

We continue to provide many educational services, including a scholarship program for bachelors, tech and vocational degrees. We also provide services through EduCare to help the dependants of our employees complete school and scholarship applications.

Do you see any connection between how you were raised and how you handle ethical situations at work?

My dad always said that being a good citizen was very important. He was a very charitable man and made significant monetary contributions to many organizations such as the Child Savings Institute, Bellevue University and the Pennie Z. Davis Child Development Center to name a few. My own personal charitable giving and that of Greater Omaha as a corporation are directed mainly towards helping children in our community.

What are the biggest ethical challenges that you think face the younger business professionals today? Advice?

I think what you have to do is figure out your personal equation for happiness and for leading a satisfying life. You have to decide what you want out of life and what will make you happy. If you want to be a leader in your organization you will have to dedicate the time necessary to learn all you can about the organization you work for and be one of the most valuable employees.

Will you be able to find balance between your professional goals and your personal and or family life? This is the biggest ethical challenge facing our younger people in the workforce. The process of figuring out your personal formula for happiness is a tough one and making those decisions that provide work-life balance can be a challenge. It is obvious to me that certain people have figured out the formula. These are the people that are leaders at work and have a successful family and personal life.
